Bronchitis Cured. Miss Maggie Griffin, 37 Metcalf Street, Toronto, writes: "After having bronchitis and cold so badly that I could hardly speak, and could not find any remedy to relieve me, I decided to try Norway Pine Syrup. It made a complete cure, and I highly recommend it to all."

Not Quite Dead.

Two Irishmen were repairing a well over on Long Island, when suddenly one of them missed his footing and fell to the bottom. The other, greatly excited, leaned over the edge and exclaimed: "Denny, oh, Denny! are ye dead?" No answer came. Then he called again:

"Denny, if ye're dead, speak!" Presently the fellow at the bottom replied:

"Sure I'm not quite dead, man, but I'm spachless."—Harper's Round Table.

Mr. Barnacle on Beans.

"Speaking about beans reminds me that all the chumps isn't moored in Boston, I take it." Bill Barnacle observed with a knowing air. "Leastwise, I've sighted some proper ones on the high seas."

"Beans or chumps?" queried the lubber in mild trepidation, after waiting for Bill to resume.

"Both, I reckon. In Boston beans is a proper tidbit, a regular out-and-out wot is it you calls it in Latin?" "Delicacy?"

"To be sure," said Bill apologetically. "I alters sheers off at them foreign words. But, as I was saying, beans on the high seas is a solemn duty, next to standing lookout or taking a trick at the wheel."

"Why?" the lubber asked. "Why? Because there ain't much else to eat, but these here blooming beans. That's w'y. Blow me, if I ain't seen trading schooners out of New England wot carried no other vittles but beans, with no pork to speak of neither. Once when I was a young squab I makes a cruise to Brazil, where we falls in with a Yankee ship wot had been condemned and ordered sold, along with her cargo. Our skipper stands by the sale and bids in two tons of white beans. We didn't need no beans, but they was cheap, so the old man puts the lot aboard and says let these here mariners revel in beans."

"On the passage home beans flowed like water on this here hooker. It was beans morning, noon and night, and for prayers, too, till the sailors cursed rightfully and tells the cook to pipe down on the mess, as they didn't figger to ruin their constitutions with no bargain counter beans. If beans isn't belayed they don't work the vessel no more, these haughty mariners says. When the skipper hears of this here mutinous language he posts the cook to set among the crew one night after supper. Then the old man happens forward accidental, and says:

"Cook, wot have you been feeding the men on this passage?"

"Beans, sir."

"Wot? Them beans I buys in Brazil?"

"Them's the I-identical beans, sir," says the cook, beginning to shiver. "You blubber-faced 'pirate,' yells the skipper, wiping his fist on the cook's nose, 'them beans is for the cabin special—for my table only—and much too good for common sailors. Let me hear of any more of 'em going forward and I'll skin you.'"

"What a mean brutal captain!" ejaculated the lubber.

"The skipper goes aft, bubbling with rage in his mind," continued Bill, "and in ten minutes a committee from the fore-castle overhauls him. Blow me, if this blooming committee didn't demand beans, likewise the very same beans they kicked about, and says the crew will mutiny if they don't get no beans. The skipper yields reluctant to this demand, and tells the cook to serve out beans again. When the schooner reaches home, boll me if you could find a bean in her with a man-o'-war's schlight. The crew actually sets up nights a-eating of them beans, such being the contrary nature of mariners."—Charles Dryden, in New York Journal.

Renaissance of the Dull Thud.
"The dull thud," said Mr. Flatdewler, "may have disappeared in a great measure in literature, but it is not lost; it may be heard now in the modern steam pipes, where often it comes down with a great jounce. But it doesn't appear to hurt itself, for often you can hear it chuckling to itself for as much as fifteen minutes afterwards."

The new English primrose, Dr. Temple, once entered an East End church while a mission service was being held, and standing in a back pew, joined in the singing of a Moody and Sankey hymn. Next to him stood a workingman, who was singing lustily in tune. The workingman stood the dissonance as long as he could, and then, nudging the bishop, said, in a whisper: "Here, dry up, mister, you're spoiling the show!"—San Francisco Wave.
And He Still Lives.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, APRIL 23rd, 1897.

GREECE has our sympathy.

THE Patron in politics has not been a distinct success.

THERE are still a few ten cent gold mining shares on the market.

BARBARIETY and poverty meet—the unspeakable Turk and the impecunious Greek have gone to war.

A WRITER in the Globe refers to Algoma as the land of promise, pine, politics and pulpwood. Algoma is indeed a land of promise—promises to pay.

THE initial step in the good roads movement has been taken. A. W. Campbell will visit this district in May. We hope his visit will be fruitful of good results.

IN the Provincial election on Tuesday the Liberals swept Nova Scotia, only four Conservatives being elected in an assembly which consists of thirty-eight members.

THE proposal to place an export duty on pulpwood is meeting with much opposition among the people of Algoma. The exportation of pulpwood is bread and meat to the settlers of Algoma, and the proposed duty would be a deathblow to the business.

THE Greek and Turk are now busily engaged butchering one another. The peace of Europe hangs by such a slender thread that it is difficult to say what will be the outcome of the OTTAWA, April 17th.—The opposition press are hard pressed to make adverse political capital out of the showing which the estimates for the ensuing year reveal. Those handed down to parliament last week were the first of the new administration. Last year the estimates of the outgoing government, as prepared by them for that year, was accepted by the Liberal Government as a matter of necessity since, at the late date of their accession to office, they were for that reason precluded from investigating and revising them. But as time went on, the money voted under these estimates was not expended by them where the government saw it was not actually required, and as a result, a considerable saving in expenditure was effected.

The estimates just submitted to the House, are acknowledged by the more fair-minded of Tories, as appearing very favorable when scrutinized. They admit that it is everywhere apparent that the most rigid economy has been practised in making them up. The frequent complaint has been raised by the tory press that superannuations and dismissals were a subterfuge, made simply to afford vacancies in the civil service, of both inside and outside branches, for government supporters. If that accusation bore on its face the element of truth then it would be difficult indeed for Liberals to deny the oft-repeated statement, that the spoil system was being introduced into Canadian affairs by the present government. But it so transpires, and all the facts which are brought out and those which remain to be produced, plainly testify that the offices vacated have been rendered vacant in the interests of economy—the fundamental principle of Liberal politics. There have been forty-two superannuations and fourteen retiring gratuities made already with more to follow. The Finance Minister informed the House that this course had effected a large saving to the country. And why?—Because, although in a few isolated cases vacancies made by officials, who were superannuated on account of age or infirmity, had been filled, nevertheless the great majority of the offices so vacated were abolished. In the determination to economise, without prejudicing the efficiency of the service, the government have had to turn a deaf ear to the clamours of their friends for office, and resolutely shun the seductive and well-beaten path travelled by their tory predecessors when satisfying the demands of their followers. The country ought then to be seized with a feeling of comfortable assurance of the honest intentions of the new government as indicated by the estimates just brought down to parliament. As the matter now stands the estimated cost of running the government of the country, for the next year, is one and a half millions less than what the late government required to do the work for the fiscal year now drawing to a close.

It seems somewhat singular that a covert threat is given out by the opposition that, by the aid of their friends in the Senate, they may make an attempt to defeat the endeavor of the government to repeal the Franchise Act. All the more strange when it is considered what a great advantage this same act gave them over the Liberals in days gone by, and now that it has passed into the possession of the liberal majority, why they should wish their opponents to have and use this potent machinery which would afford liberals the same partisan advantages, is a matter to be wondered at. There is an overwhelming Conservative element in the members constituting the Senate. The figures are 65 Conservatives to 16 Liberals. It is the aim of the government to establish a franchise that will be fair and just to all, and one would naturally suppose that the party to be

TRENTON TALK.

Not a Rumor, But An Ascertained Fact
 What a Reporter Has to Say About the Case of Mrs. D. N. Ostrander.

Our reporter called at the cozy residence of Mrs. D. N. Ostrander, Trenton, and was met at the door by a bright, sprightly and energetic lady, who turned out to be no less than Mrs. Ostrander herself, and who told how she was restored from a condition of misery to one of health and strength by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Said Mrs. Ostrander: 'I have been a great sufferer for many years with my heart and nerves, and was almost a complete wreck. When going around the house I would get so bad that I had to lie down on the lounge until I could recover my breath. This occurred several times during the day. At night I could hardly sleep at all, and when I would drop off to sleep would wake up with a start, followed by a suffocating feeling as if my heart had stopped beating for ever. I have had to have my feet put in hot water, and have hot cloths put across my body before I could recover, in fact this was almost a nightly occurrence. Pen cannot portray what my feelings were. I got very languid and weak, had no ambition, and thought that everything was going wrong with me. I grew morbid in mind, lost my appetite, and had to force myself to eat what little I did. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, weighing only 90 pounds at the time I commenced to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can tell you I would have given but little for my chances of living much longer. Several doctors attended me, and I have taken all kinds of proprietary medicines, but without avail. I got a box at last of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills at Shurle's drug store, and thought that I would try them as a last resort. The result was simply marvelous. I began to improve from the first few doses, and noticed a big difference before I had taken one box. Now I sleep well, the suffocating feeling is completely gone. I have splendid strength, and my struggle. All Europe may be plunged in a bloody war inside of a month.

A CLERGYMAN in Western Ontario was brought up with a short turn last week for repeating some choice gossip reflecting upon the character of a lady member of his flock. To listen to the scandal monger is bad enough, but to repeat the stories is not only ungentlemanly but unwise.

MR. WHITNEY, the leader of the Conservative opposition in the Ontario Legislature, and we use the words advisedly, for the Patrons vie with the Tories as an opposition party, intends making a tour of Western Ontario this summer. Mr. Whitney has need to do a lot of missionary work to even hold his own against the economical, capable and able administration of the Hon. Mr. Hardy.

IN 1878, when the Liberals were deposed from power, the annual expenditure on account of civil service salaries was about $900,000. When they resumed the reins of Government last year they found it had swelled to $1,400,000. With commendable promptitude the Liberals have started in to reduce this excessive expenditure and already a large number of unnecessary officials have been dismissed and a number of useless offices abolished.

OUR esteemed contemporary, The Beaver, is grievously disappointed with the government. It expected nothing in the way of reforms from the Tory administration and therefore was not disappointed. It expected great things from the Laurier Government, but they are not undoing the evil of the late administration quite rapidly enough to suit our cotem and it is in a measure disappointed. It still has hope, however, and if it will compass its soul in patience for a few years we believe the Government will come up to its "great expectations." Our cotem together with thousands of honest meaning Conservatives have now good reason to feel thankful that we have an honest, capable and business-like government in power at Ottawa, and one that will strive to promote the best interests of Canada.

THE KIND THAT CURES.

The Great Spring Health Renewer.

Paine's Celery Compound for Men, Women and Children.

Read the following testimony that comes from Miss Blake, of 303 Hugabon Street, Hamilton:

"For years I suffered greatly, and was under the care of doctors who finally told me I was going into consumption. I was becoming worse through the use of medicines, and I gave up my doctors. While in a very critical condition, not able to sleep or rest, always faint and weak, appetite and digestion bad, and my system run-down and little life left in me, I commenced to use Paine's Celery Compound. After taking one bottle I felt much relieved. I have used in all seven or eight bottles, and am now a new woman, can enjoy life, and am as well as I wish to be. Many thanks for your great medicine."

most interested in the passage of such a law, ought surely to be the party that has lost control of the election machinery which so long furthered their schemes for retention of power. It seems evident that it would be a wild course to pursue in obstructing repeal, or in blocking the passage of a proper franchise bill in the Senate, yet if followed to that end the Tory party are deserving of a good dose of their own medicine at the hands of Liberal officials. It may be injudicious to adopt the various provincial franchises as a basis of federal representation, but in the absence of any better method being submitted, the most feasible plan that recommends itself as a fair and economic one should be accepted.

It is understood that the plebiscite bill will soon be introduced by the Hon. Mr. Fisher into the House. There are already certain vague rumours floating about as to the provisions contained in the measure. It is certain, however, that apart from enacting the necessary machinery for testing the sentiment of Canada upon the advisability of adopting a prohibitory liquor law, it will be complete in all its parts and will give, if carried at the polls, the means to attain the desired end of the abolition of the liquor traffic. Looking to the future in the possibility of prohibition becoming an accomplished fact, some provision must be embodied in the bill to make up the direct loss to the Dominion exchequer of about $8,000,000 of revenue received yearly from liquor. It is no small problem to be solved. Indirect taxation has been pushed to its last limit, and some other means must be looked to for supplying the deficit that would arise by the adoption of a prohibitory liquor law. The poor man's necessities of life will not suffer any greater exactions, and the rich man's luxuries already are burdened to an extent that smuggling is apparently on the increase. The plan of direct taxation, it is hinted, may have to be resorted to in the event of prohibition being an established fact, and in that case the direct tax would not fall far short of $1.50 per capita, or about $7.50 per family, annually, taking the average at five persons to the family. At present much of the current comment on the question is mere side speculation. Eventually the stern facts have got to be faced and thoroughly threshed out. It is to be hoped that, although the element of fanaticism will pervade the temperance ranks to a certain extent, the more level-headed, Conservative temperance advocates will not permit, in the heat of battle, sentiment to out-weigh good judgment in dealing with this politico-moral and financial problem. APPARENTLY A HOPELESS CASE

A Kincardine Banker who Suffered Distressingly from Indigestion—Apparently a Hopeless Case of Stomach Trouble Until South American Nerve was Used—His Words are: "It Cured Me Absolutely."

What this wonderful remedy for all forms of stomach trouble can do, is best told in the words of John Boyer, banker, Kincardine, Ont. "About a year ago, as a result of heavy work no doubt, I became very much troubled with indigestion; associated with it were those terrible distressing feelings that can hardly be described in any language. I had tried various methods of ridding myself of the trouble, but without success, until I was influenced to use South American Nerve. The result, and I gladly say it for the benefit of others—this remedy cured me, and I never hesitate to recommend it to any person affected with any form of stomach trouble." Sold by A. W. Much Too Literal.

People who take all things literally are apt to tread on other people's toes. The man who walked in where he saw a sign, "Walk in," and who was ordered out, was a literal man; and so was he who went into a pawnbroker's shop and demanded 40 shillings because there was a placard in the window that read:
"Look at this watch for 40s."
"I looked at it," said he, "and now I want my £2."
The most amusing incident we have heard is that of the countryman who, while sauntering along a city street, saw a sign:
"Please ring the bell for the caretaker."
After reflecting for a few minutes, he walked up and gave the bell such a pull that it nearly came out by the roots. In a few minutes an angry-faced man opened the door.
"Are you the caretaker?" asked the bell-puller.
"Yes; what do you want?"
"I saw that notice, so I rang the bell, and now I want to know why you can't ring the bell yourself!"—Tit-Bits.

Call & Tuttle.

He was a typical hayseed, with a spray of blonde bristles protruding from his Adam's apple. He read the sign over the door, "Call & Tuttle," with a puzzled expression and then entered the office.
"What can we do for you, sir?" asked the manager blandly, washing his hands with imaginary soap, and bowing.
"I want to tuttle."
"You want to what?" asked the bewildered manager.
"I want to tuttle. I read your sign, 'Call & Tuttle.' You see, I've called, and now I want to tuttle. Where do you—"
Several of the young lady clerks giggled, and the manager gently but firmly led him out, and warned him impressively if he was seen in that neighborhood again he would be turned over to the police.—Tammany Times

THE ONLY ONE.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure where all other Remedies Fail.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE NOT INCURABLE.

But there's only One Cure in the World, and that we have Named.—Hundreds Testify to Cures.—Never a Failure Recorded.

It used to be said, "If you have Bright's Disease, it won't be long before people are walking slow behind you."

Bright's Disease affects brainy men particularly. The brainier and more active a man, the more liable he is to Bright's Disease. Bright's Disease is a disease of the Kidney. It is the name given to the fatty degeneration of those organs. It is caused by excessive use of alcoholic drinks. It is caused by excessive eating of rich food. It may be caused by exposure to cold and moisture. It may be caused by improper living.

But it's not with the CAUSE we have to deal. It is with the CURE.

It used to be thought that Bright's Disease was incurable. We know better now. Restore the Kidneys to health, and you may eat what you like, drink what you like, work as hard or be as active as you like, and bid defiance to death-dealing Bright's Disease.

But woe to the man who doesn't take care of his Kidneys! When they cease to filter the blood, the blood reeks with poison. Urine actually flows in the veins. You die a lingering death. The spine and extremities first; the brain last. Dying at the bottom while living at the top!

Bright's Disease may be cured by DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS, which restore the Kidneys, making them filter the blood properly. DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS are the ONLY SPECIFIC FOR BRIGHT'S DISEASE. They were compounded just for that purpose. They have cured hundreds of cases. They will cure your Kidneys. Try them. Fifty cents a box. For sale at all druggists.

Wm. G. Wade, 940 Queen East, Toronto, says:—"I have used thirty-six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am cured of Bright's Disease after all else had failed."

T. E. Craig, 769 Queen East, Toronto, says:—"Never expecting a cure of Bright's Disease, I have been agreeably disappointed by a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Mrs. Maude Cotterell, Belleville, Ont., says:—"I have used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and have been cured of what the doctor said was Bright's Disease."

SO DOCTORS SAID CONCERNING
RICHARD B. COLLINS.

He Spent Months in the Toronto Hospital Without Any Benefit—Pink Pills Cure Him After All Other Treatment Failed.

From the Echo, Warton, Ont.

The Echo presents to its readers the following plain statement of fact, with the simple comment that a medicine that can perform so remarkable a cure is simply invaluable, and it is no wonder that the aggregate of its sales throughout the country is enormous.

I, Richard B. Collins, hereby make the following statement, which can be confirmed by any number of witnesses in this section of the country. I first began to complain about five years ago. I had then been working in a fish shanty, and was wet almost the whole time, summer and winter. I was then confined to the house for three months. This was my first attack and on getting better I commenced work again the first of the following February and continued at it until the next January when I took a much worse attack. The doctors pronounced it rheumatism and after treating me for that disease until about the first of working in the woods and have no trouble from the hip unless over-exerted. During the last three years I have spent $300.00 in doctors' bills, and medicines, trying everything recommended, but without any good results until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, to which I owe my restored condition, as the doctors gave up all hopes of ever seeing me out of bed alive and well. I may say that before I began taking Pink Pills during my last attack, I put in many a night so bad that I never expected to be alive in the morning."

Rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous headache, nervous prostration and diseases depending upon humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc., all disappear before a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They give a healthy glow to pale and sallow complexions and build up and renew the entire system. Sold by all dealers and post paid at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Do not be persuaded to take some substitute.

In the Crimea, during the winter, Gen. Canrobert was in the habit of going about among the men of his command, incognito, to see what they were about, and to learn their wants and encourage the soldiers if they needed encouragement. One morning, on one of these tours, he came upon a young conscript who had stripped himself to the waist and was bathing his body with handfuls of snow.

"That's an odd sort of soap you're using," exclaimed the General.

"Oh, it's good enough," said the soldier. "You see I'm young, and more than that I'm a Lorrainer from Nancy, and a fellow-provincial of Gen. Drouot, who shaved himself with snow on the march from Moscow, you know, with the mercury thirty degrees below freezing. The old fellows in my company, you see, bother me and make fun of me because I have no beard, and since I can't shave out of doors like Drouot, I have to do this to show those old fellows that I'm no more afraid of the cold than I am of the enemy."

"Well," said the Canrobert, "what if I should give you another way of getting even with those old fellows?"

"Why, I shouldn't mind," answered the young soldier.

"I'll make you a corporal," said the General.

The soldier laughed. "I guess that won't go," said he. "My Colonel wouldn't have it."

"I'm higher up than your Colonel; I am Gen. Canrobert."

The young soldier was in transports—especially as the same day he was made a corporal in the presence of the regiment.

THE WORLD.

The world is well lost when the world is wrong.

No matter how men deride you,
For if you are patient and firm and strong
You will find it in time (though the time be long)
That the world wheels round beside you.

If you dare to sail first o'er a new thought track,
For a while it will scourge and score you,
Then, coming abreast with a skillful tack,
It will clap you round and slap your back
And vow it was there before you.

The world means well, though it wanders and strays
From the straight, short cut to duty;
So go ahead in that path, I say,
For after a while it will come your way
Bringing its pleasures and beauty.

That every maiden fair
Was an angel unaware,
And I wondered when and where
The wings would grow.

II.
But wiser now am I,
A good deal,
Thou I've sometimes seen them fly,
Yet feel
They are something just between
Man and angel in their mien,
Since my Philidia I've seen
On her wheel.

III.
She does not show a sign
Of a wing;
But her figure is divine,
And the fling
Of her abbreviated gown,
As she flickers through the town,
Might buy the throne and crown
Of a king!

IV.
No halo of a saint
Does she wear,
Such as Lippo loved to paint;
But her hair—
As when all heaven streams
Thro' the landscape of my dreams—
In such glory floats and gleams
On the air!

V.
But not all for heaven she,
Not too good!
Yet she's good enough for me
In any mood,
And if her dashing wheel
Took her even to the dell,
Thither, too, I'd gently steal—
Yes, I would!

AN OLD STORY.

Why the Widow Would Succeed if She Kept Mum.

Cobbie—Mrs. Crabson is going to start a boarding-house.

Stone—What! the widow I met the other day?

Cobbie—Yes. You know she has been very unfortunate.

Stone—So I judge. She wouldn't be starting a boarding-house if she hadn't been.

Cobbie—But, seriously, old fellow, she is a fine woman.

Stone—I have no doubt of it.

Cobbie—And you know she comes of one of the best families in the country.

Stone—Does she?

Cobbie—Yes, indeed. You know at one time they were very wealthy.

Stone—Were they?

Cobbie—Oh, yes. She used to ride around in her carriage and have a retinue of servants.

Stone—Is that so?

Cobbie—Yes, sir. There wasn't a prouder or more exclusive lady in the land than she.

Stone—What was the trouble? Husband die?

Cobbie—Yes. Circumstances very sad. He was a very bright man. Exceedingly so. But he failed suddenly, and died of a broken heart. Sad case, isn't it?

Stone—Very.

Cobbie—That woman ought to succeed, don't you think?

Stone—She will, old man, she will. That is, on one condition. She must keep silent.

Cobbie—Why?

Stone—If she tells that story people will think she has been in the business all her life.

Education in Russia.

A few figures, taken from official sources, and referring to the first years of the present decade, will throw considerable light on the matter of popular education in Russia. About 200,000 recruits are yearly enlisted in the army and of these only about 50,000 can read. Among the peasants proper, the percentage of illiterates rises to 95 per cent. In some parts  there is only one school to each 200 villages. If Russia had the same proportion as her neighbor, Sweden, for example, she would have about 250,000 schools, while she actually has only 18,000. Again, take Russia's enormous budget of 1,000,000,000 roubles. Of this only 500,000 are devoted to popular education—that is, one-eleventh part of what is devoted to the maintenance of the Imperial Court, one six-hundredth part of the cost of the army, and one two-thousandth part of the whole. At about the same time Great Britain was spending about £25,000,000 for elementary education, etc., with a population little more than a third of that of Russia. Moreover, about two-thirds of this paltry sum of 500,000 roubles goes in salaries of inspectors.—From "In the Land of Tolstol."

Great Men Who Smoked.

Napoleon once said that tobacco smoking was a habit only fit to amuse duguards. This remark was somewhat in the nature of "sour grapes," the great man being unable to forget the effect of his first cigar. John Milton smoked a pipe of tobacco every night before retiring. Among other famous men who are mentioned as universal users of tobacco are Bismarck, Lord Brougham, Mr. Spurgeon, Emerson, Carlyle, Huxley, Victor Hugo, Bulwer Lytton, T. Mayson, Gibbon, Charles Kingsley, Dickens and Thackeray. On the other hand, many great men have been opposed to the use of the weed. Some of these were Voltaire, Rousseau, Mirabeau and Swinburne, who is quoted as saying: "James I. was a knave, a tyrant, a fool, a liar and a coward; but I love him. I worshipped him, he arose he slit the throat of that backward Raleigh, who invented filthy smoking." This tirade is qualified by another writer, who says that tobacco has made more good husbands, good men, kind masters and indulgent fathers than any other blessed thing on this universal earth.

WAITING.

Far away, by the jasper sea,
Three forms are walking, side by side,
And now and then they bend to gaze
Over the ocean wide.

And three of us but walk and pray
Beside a dark and boundless sea;
We cannot pierce the radiant glow
That folds the other three.

They watch above the rolling world,
Waiting till one, at God's command,
Shall cross the space that lies between
This and the further land.

And, Oh! I long for the years to pass;
And, Oh! I cry for the time to be
When they who are watching with eager eyes
Shall bend and beckon me.

So sang I but few weeks ago,
When, through the silence, a message came,
And one of us passed to the distant three,
Hearing with joy His name.

Four walk now by the Jasper sea,
Turning earthward their radiant eyes.
Where two of us now, with yearning hearts,
Look ever to Paradise

PRIDE OF A VILLAGE.

Mrs. Silvester Dean Leveen was polishing her brass knocker. Her long, thin hands rubbed and rubbed till the little white curls on her forehead danced like street children. Yet the labor had no perceptible effect. The metal shone like light, but so it did when she began to clean it. It had shone like that yesterday and the day before, and, indeed, every day for 60 years. There was a smooth circle all around the knocker where her delicate hands had worn into the hard, black wood of the door. Nevertheless the old lady rubbed away just as she had done every morning since the spring of 1833, when she was brought a bride into the house. She was the pride of Greenwich village then, and she meant to be still.

On this particular frosty morning Mrs. Leveen tarried longer than usual at her task. After the lion's head was satisfactory even to her sharp eyes, she worked on. But it was evident in the glances she shot across Bank street that her attention was not given wholly to the work of her hands. Neither was it diverted to her customary inspection of the neighbor's knockers. Theirs glistened like hers, and, besides, every time she looked up Percy was frightened. The last time he had been rebuked in this temper by his aunt was when he was a boy. He meant no offense.

"I beg your pardon, Aunt Martha," he murmured.

Mrs. Leveen took her knitting from the table and worked busily at it till she was quite calm. She looked up after every few thrusts of her needle, indignantly at first, then coldly, and finally the habitual expression of kindness returned to her face.

"I dare say you are in a hurry to go to town, Percy, and I shall not detain you much longer. You may tell me something about this young—this girl. How old is she?"

"She is going on 19, Aunt Martha." "Is she cultivated, educated? Come, Percy, tell me all about her."

"She went through the grammar school, I think, but she had to work after that. So she can't play the piano or sing, but she is a nice girl and can tend the house and cook, now that her mother is dead."

G. A. BROWNE Gen. Pass. Agent
H. B. SHERWOOD Superintendent

They were so close together that they were almost touching. The young man in a cart's blouse came out. He saw the old lady across the street, though he pretended not to. He busied himself ostentatiously about the horses' heads for a moment and then turned back to the truck. Mrs. Leveen had seen him. She bent herself earnestly to the knocker and in a few strokes finished it off. Then she faced towards the street and fixed the truckman with her eyes till he had to look up.

"Good morning, Aunt Martha," he said, as he doffed his cap.

She beckoned to him to come to her.

"Good morning, Percy," she answered pleasantly, as he approached her, cap in hand. "Come in a moment. I wish to speak with you."

The interview he had dreaded for weeks was upon him now. He knew from the first it was inevitable, but day after day he had put it off, omitting his usual calls on his aunt, and avoiding her sight and summons. Now that she had caught him he was glad. As he followed the old lady into her prim, comfortable sitting-room he made a pitiful figure of humility; but in the meekness of his soul there was the cheerfulness of finality.

"Sit down, Percy," she said, in the sweet-toned voice he loved.

He took the chair she indicated, and she seated herself in her old rocker.

"Percy, dear," she began, "is it true that I hear you mean to marry this girl?"

"Yes, Aunt Martha. I was going to tell you, but knowing as you were again it—knowing that you would not like to have me do so—I was afraid to come to you about it."

"Don't twirl your cap, my dear; gentlemen don't do that, you know."

"I am sorry, Percy, you felt that way. It is my intention always to be kind and sympathetic. You should have been quite sure I would have heard your story through with understanding. Now, tell me everything. She is the daughter, I am told, of a German in Hudson street."

"That's right, aunt. Her father has the biggest corner grocery over there, and he has made his pile—I mean has made money since he's been there."

"How long has he been here?"

"Going on 25 years. He's almost an old Ninth-warder now. He's some in politics, and his family is right in it."

"Percy! I never knew them."

"I know, but you wouldn't. It ain't my fault. I wanted to have them all over to mother's so, as you could be introduced to them."

The old lady looked as though she would answer this, but she did not. She was silent a moment before she proceeded.

"So her father is a grocer?"

"Yes; like Mr. Jamison, who you like well enough."

"Mr. Jamison is a gentleman, my dear. The misfortunes of his family can never alter that. The Jamisons are of the oldest Greenwich families on both sides. He is a grocer by necessity. This person of whom we are speaking is one by choice."

"Well, Aunt Martha, it's as good as being a truckman, and better."

Mrs. Leveen winced.

"You might have been a judge, like your father, or a senator, like your grandfather. I wanted you to enter political life."

"Politics is pretty low down these days," Percy remarked. "It ain't what it was. Besides, I tried to get an office from Mike McNamara, but he said I wouldn't do in any where the pay was as much as the trucking pays. And I guess that's about so."

The last sentence was cheerfully spoken. Mrs. Leveen looked at her nephew's ruddy cheeks and sighed.

"I do wish, Percy," she said, gently, "that you could have found some one in Greenwich. That part of Hudson street, where these people live is way beyond the outskirts of the old village, out where the hog fields were till the immigrants began to settle around us."

"But what's the difference, Aunt Martha? It's all one now. There ain't no Greenwich any more. It's all just New York City, so what's the use of pretending?"

The impatience in the young man's tone amazed his aunt almost as much as the sentiment he uttered. Never before had he failed to show her respect. On the contrary, the humbleness of his demeanor had been a grievance to her; it did not become one of her own blood to manifest the same awe before her that an ordinary Ninth-warder did.

The old lady straightened in her chair, the lines about her mouth stiffened and her eyes glistened like her knocker as she answered:

"Percy dear! You forget to whom you are speaking. You forget yourself, sir, and your good breeding is evident."

she modest? Describe her to me, my dear. Is she pretty?"

Percy was encouraged by the few words of approval he had won. —

"Aunt, she's a beauty, that's what."

"What do you say, a what?"

"I mean, she's a beauty. She's got blue eyes and blonde hair and the nicest, biggest, reddest cheeks. She ain't what you would call quiet; she's more lively-like. You ought to hear her laugh when we're down on the docks nights with the rest of the crowd. I'll bet you could hear her across the river in Hoboken. And jolly? If she gets a mug as is too fresh she can jolly him along to beat the band. But she's on the level, too. She does the square thing with her old man every clip. The housework has to be done before she's in for the game, and she slaves for her little sisters and brothers—just slaves for them, and yet she does it as willingly. But then she's good to everybody; always ready to help out with work when neighbors are behind or sick or have company, and she sticks up for horses and cats and all like that. You wouldn't believe she was that way, though, to see her at a ball or dancing on excursion boats up the river. She's a good looker and a good dresser, and when she's out in full rig—well, say, she's a sight. The other fellows don't do nothing when we're out—"

Percy stopped short. Mrs. Leveen had risen suddenly, and she stood erect before him, tall and white and proud.

"Why, Aunt Martha!" he exclaimed.

"That's enough, Percy. Thank you. I see I have been wrong, all wrong, in this matter from the first. You shall have your way, for it is right, I consent."

"Oh, Aunt Martha," he cried, springing up and seizing her hand to kiss.

"I am so glad. But I knew you would after hearing about her. And say, aunt, you ought to see her once. You couldn't help but like her and admire her. Everybody in the ward does. Why, do you know what they call her, the men down at the G rapevine? The way you looked then made me think of it. Call her 'Princess of Greenwich Village.'"

There are bandits nowadays as well as in the days of old. Business men have to meet what are known as business bandits. They may not commit violence with knife and pistol, but they resort to all manner of dishonest business methods, and the honest business man must be brave, strong and steady if he would meet and overcome them. The modern business man needs above all other qualifications—good health. Without good health, he may be naturally shrewd, bright and capable, but he will eventually fail. It takes a keen brain and steady nerves to be successful. Impure blood will befog the brightest brain and shake the steadiest nerves.

The greatest known blood-maker and purifier is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It corrects all disorders of the digestion, tones the liver, makes the appetite keener and assimilation perfect. Consequently the blood is plentifully supplied with the elements of nutrition and the body is properly nourished. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. All good druggists sell it.

H. Gaddis, Esq., of No. 313 S. J. Street, Tacoma, Washington, writes: "I was taken ill in February, 1902, with headache and pain in my back. I called in a doctor and he came three times. He said I was bilious, but I kept getting worse. I took a cough so that I could only sleep when propped up in bed. My lungs hurt me and I got so poor that I was just skin and bone. I thought I was going to die. I tried a bottle of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it did me so much good that I tried another one and it made me strong and well. It saved my life."

ON CARVING IN CLAY.

ART WORK THAT MAY BECOME A DELIGHT TO LADIES.

How to Proceed to Make Elegant Vases, Decorated Tiles, Etc.—All About the Clay and Its Condition—The Tools Required.

The London Queen informs its readers as to an interesting art, carving in clay. The following is reprinted. Reference is made to the illustration reproduced herewith:

The thickness of the clay forming the sides of a vase might be a trifle stouter than that desirable for perforating. A quarter inch limit should, however, be ample for all ordinary purposes. Suggesting, as it does, a comparison with carving in wood, I cannot do better than point out the cardinal points in which clay carving differs from that of his fellow in wood.

Granting our clay in suitable condition, the beginner might with profit attack the simple subject of the title at head of page (figure 18), an ivy leaf. To get an impression of this upon the clay the following simple method is available: Obtain a piece of thin tissue or tracing paper, and trace with a B or BB pencil the outline firmly on the tissue, then, reversing it, go over the outline again with the same soft black pencil. Apply this to the damp clay with a little pressure round the outline; by this means we shall obtain a tolerably distinct image of the outline ready for cutting.

In wood carving it is usual to go round such an outline with chisels of a suitable shape, and, striking downward, cutting the fibers to the extreme of an eighth or quarter of an inch. Such, now, will be our proceeding, but in place of the chisel or chisels—for the wood carver needs several even for the simple outline we have before us—we shall use a cutter, a thin blade, pointed out necessarily sharp, but thin. Holding this vertically, and its point buried in the clay to a depth of what we instinctively guess to be an eighth of an inch, we propel it along the outline, leaving a trench. Thus a limit is established of which our next proceeding takes advantage. This time not cutting, but what I cannot better side by side, as in illustration. Figure 16 is a suggestion for one side of a memento of the coming event, the celebration of the long reign of our gracious Queen. This, with the addition of end panels, containing the dates 1837-1897, will make an interesting souvenir of an occasion not likely to be repeated again for a long time to come.

MRS. KATHERINE A. TINGLEY.

The Woman Head of Theosophists Known as "The Crusaders."

"Truth, light and liberation for discouraged humanity" is the inscription in letters of gold on a purple banner which has nearly completed a circuit of the globe. It is borne by a small group of people calling themselves "Theosophical Crusaders." This party reached Toronto, on its way to New York, from which city it started around the world on June 13, 1896, on March 31. It held meetings in the Queen City on April 1 and 2, and then passed on. The leader of "The Crusaders" is Mrs. Katherine A. Tingley, and it is to her earnest efforts that the successful conduct of the crusade is chiefly due. The expedition first visited England, and has since been in France, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Egypt, India, Australia, New Zealand, Samoa and the Hawaiian Islands. They again touched American soil at San Francisco Feb. 11, a little over a month ago. The object of the crusade being the conversion of the people of the world to theosophy, the crusaders, of course, held public and private meetings in all the countries they visited. They also gave "brotherhood suppers," to which the poor were invited, that the principles of theosophy might be explained to them and in order also to give them an opportunity to ask whatever question occurred to them concerning the faith they were asked to embrace. They claim that their mission has been to carry the gospel to all nations, proclaim to all men that new commandment "love one another." This they claim to have done and at their own expense. As no member of the society receives any pay whatever for services, there certainly can be no question of the sincerity of the motives, whatever may be the success of their efforts.

By all odds the most interesting figure in this crusade is Mrs. Tingley. The interest that attaches to her is due to the fact that the late William Q. Judge, who, at the time of his death a year ago, was president of the Theosophical Society in America, left a will in which he named Mrs. Tingley as his successor. Although but little known to members of the society before this time, she was easily identified by the executors of Mr. Judge's will by the photograph of her which he had placed among his papers.

In appearance Mrs. Tingley is rather tall and quite stout. She has a graceful manner and charming appearance.

Passing of Mrs. Beecher

A lovely life ended on March 8, 1897, when Mrs. Beecher died on the 10th anniversary of her famous husband's death. Mrs. Beecher was born in 1812, in West Sutton, Mass. She was the daughter of Dr. Bullard. She met Mr. Beecher first in 1830, when the latter was a student of Amherst College. They were married in 1837, and began housekeeping at Lawrenceville, Ind., moving afterward to Indianapolis. It was at their home in the latter city, it is said, that Harriet Beecher Stowe, the preacher's sister, got the inspiration which resulted in the production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In August of 1895 Mrs. Beecher went to Port Townsend, Wash., unattended, to celebrate

Merit Talks

"Merit talks" the intrinsic value of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Merit in medicine means the power to cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses actual and unequalled curative power and therefore it has true merit. When you buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, and take it according to directions, to purify your blood, or cure any of the many blood diseases, you are morally certain to receive benefit. The power to cure is there. You are not trying an experiment. It will make your blood pure, rich and nourishing, and thus drive out the germs of disease, strengthen the nerves and build up the whole system.

the time always require professional victims that "nearly all the high numbers have been drawn." Thus encouraged, the young man grows reckless and draws three innocent-looking envelopes. The first ticket may read "49 cents." That is not bad, but the others may cost $1.33 and $1.46 respectively. Slowly and thoughtfully the victim pays the bill, while his friend, who holds the cards, smilingly sympathizes with him for a moment and then goes off to seek other game, leaving the speculator to reflect upon the fact that he is out $3.25 and has only three chances in 150 of winning a second hand wheel.

Adjusting the saddle properly has much to do with safe and comfortable riding. The rule should be to keep the saddle as near parallel to the bar as possible. Avoid tilting, especially backward. Breathe through the nose; if forced to breathe through the mouth, keep the tongue well pressed against the upper front teeth—to avoid inhalation of cold air, the force of which should be broken by passing through the nose and warmed for inspiration.

A sponge bath with tepid water and friction is beneficial immediately after a ride in the open air. Sponging with diluted alcohol relieves the muscular soreness and stiffness. Violent riding will produce heart disease. Women suffering from shortness of breath will find the exercise dangerous. Only a sponge and friction bath should be taken immediately after riding. The body is too fatigued; a full plunge is then too exhausting.

Michael Diakoff, a young Russian, is the latest bicycle racing sensation in England. Before he had been in Her Majesty's "tight little isle" two weeks he had won the twenty-five mile championship of the National Cyclists' Union. That was his first, and, so far, his only day on the English track for racing purposes. The brief despatches from London call him a "cycling phenomenon," and other names of the kind. Diakoff will go after other National Cyclists' Union championships, and it is probable that he will get some of them. English bicycle papers speak of the young Russian in terms of highest praise. Judging by his work in training they declare that he will cut an important figure in English racing this summer. London Wheeling says of him that he has a fine style, not unlike Larry Wheeler's, and that he has the material and motion of a fast flyer. Diakoff came to England with a record of having ridden more than twenty-six miles, unpaced, within the hour. Like most other European racers he goes in for long distance work rather than for sprinting. Diakoff's name is pronounced, Mitchell Jaykoff. Jaap Eden, the "flying Dutchman," is just now one of European cycling, is just now one of the most important figures in Paris. He has beaten Johnnie Johnson, Morin, whom the French papers call the "champion of the amateur world," and everybody else he has met. Eden has wonderful speed and endurance and is recognized as one of the best men on the bicycle tracks of Europe.

When a nut repeatedly forces its way off a screw, owing to the wearing of the thread, it is a good plan to cover the thread with rosin before screwing the nut tight. Before putting on the nut it should be slightly warmed.

Much of the trouble which is experienced with lamps is due to the fact that the wick is far too closely woven to burn easily. Keep the wick trimmed well and lamp clean. Be sure, too, to see that all the ventilation holes are an eighth of an inch thick, the ends of which are beaten out flat (see illustration figures 1, 2), and tempered. Wire of a square section is preferable to the round. Sometimes the ribs of an umbrella, if an old one be handy, can be utilized by the beginner with a little ingenuity, these having the advantages of toughness and straightness. Some, also, are V-shaped, and make up into capital veining or parting tools (figure 12). If rubbed down on a stone and finished with emery. But this is a digression. Having our chisel ready for use, we take it as we should a pen, but with the point directed toward us, and inserting one end of the blade a quarter of an inch from the outline, gently force the blade point foremost to the bottom of the trench we have previously cut till we think the chisel has reached the line, when we firmly draw or press the chisel forward, keeping the same angle as we started with. At the end of the stroke (which would be limited by an opposing line) we gently lift, by means of the blade, the severed clay. Should our guess as to the depth of the trench have been correct, it will require but little humoring; most probably it will fall out of its own accord.

This is the principle for the carving of a clay surface. The facility of cutting the outline has a great advantage over the same process in wood, and likewise the removal of a depth of clay from around the outline is of a far simpler and quicker nature in the clay than in wood. The more subtle varieties of surface so characteristic of fine woodwork are all possible in the clay.

The file (figure 14) will give the opportunity of acquiring more skill. Proceed to get out the outline, which, in this case, had better be done with a pair of compasses; then cut it to a depth of an eighth of an inch; follow by paring or bevelling all round, and remove the bulk of clay where dotted; to accomplish which cross cut, mosaic-fashion, the surface to be removed. Lifting each piece as cut with the point of the cutting tool. The broken surface left is often worth retaining, though it can be smoothed by the rakes (figure 5), and tools, slightly bent over, afterward stamped or dotted by the tracer (figure 6). The intersection of the various features will be emphasized by the carving, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the design.

The simple vase (figure 15) furnishes us with another type of design, the carving being executed in the same manner as the preceding forms. The background in this is quite removed, then stamped with the end of the tracer. This tool can be capitally made from the slate pencils usually furnished to children at schools, one end being sharpened to a point and rounded, the other, with the assistance of a file, made into a star, etc. The flowers are simple in outline, to show the use that can be made of the barrels of pens; these taking the place of gouges in the clay carver's outfit. A file and three or four barrels of pens, i.e., the part that holds the nib—will make good substitutes for gouges, and are used much in the same manner (see figures 4, 7, 8). Figure 9, a large size, must be cut from a piece of tin or zinc, and bent. Many fanciful combinations are to be made in this manner, much like pastry trimmers. The remaining tools are a tool known as the loop, for hollowing flowers—hairpins ground at the end make capital ones—and two smaller forms of loops, which are used for lines, borders, etc. These are made from large-eyed needles, ground laterally to a cutting edge. When used the clay passes like a thread through the eye of the needle, leaving a clear-cut channel. Double lines are done with two needles set remaining on the same corner for several weeks. After her husband's death, Mrs. Beecher resided in a comfortable brick house at Hicks and Orange streets, Brooklyn. The widow of the noted pastor met with some severe financial disasters in 1894, and found herself unable to pay the $800 a year demand. It was a great trial to her to leave this house, for its rooms were filled with reminiscences of the prominent life of her husband. Her table was situated in a sunny bay window, and so placed that, when at work, she could get a good view of Plymouth Church, near by. The walls were covered with photo-

LATE MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER. Graphs of the Beecher family for generations back, and the kindly features of her husband looked down upon her from dozens of pictures taken at every period of his life. Everything about the rooms indicated the cheery nature of the venerable occupant. The children of the neighborhood were deeply devoted to her. The little ones played about the house and grounds with a freedom which is born only of love. But she cheerfully moved into a small flat in a Plymouth apartment house, on Orange street, near the church where so many years her late husband conducted services. And here she busied herself throughout the day in reading, writing and sewing. Her articles in "The Ladies' Home Journal," entitled "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," were widely read in this country and England, as were her sketches in other periodicals.

A Handy Garden Manure Cart.
While on a recent trip through a portion of our county I saw a contrivance that struck me as a good thing. While nearing the home of a farmer I saw in the road the marks of mowing machine wheels, and as they were so far apart I could not conceive of them as belonging to a mower—especially at this time of year—so I concluded to investigate it if I could succeed in tracing the tracks to the hiding place of the object in question. On arriving in sight of the barn, I found the object of my search. It proved to be a cart placed on an old pair of mowing machine wheels. And the farmer at that moment had it backed up to the stable door and was loading it with manure. Every few mornings when the box was full he hitched his team to the cart and drove to the field to unload. The rough pen sketch accompanying this will show its construction. In size the box is about six feet long and five feet wide and two feet deep.—C. L. Reamer, in Ohio Farmer.

Keeping Up Hedge Fences.
Hedges are useful or detrimental according to the way they are kept. A well-trimmed hedge is ornamental and becomes better every year, but if neglected and allowed to grow without attention it is very unsightly. The first year is the most important in managing a hedge, and in three years it should be in a condition to demand but little trimming. A hedge is better than a fence when once established, and can be so managed the first three years as to be impenetrable to small animals.

In rheumatism South American Rheumatic Cure has been found a certain antidote for this painful disease. It is always effective. Mrs. N. Ferris, wife of a well known manufacturer of Highgate, Ont., says: "I was seriously affected with rheumatic pains in my ankles, and at times was almost disabled. I tried everything as I thought, and doctored for years without much benefit. I was induced to use South American Rheumatic Cure. To my delight, the first dose gave me more relief than I had had for years, and two bottles have completely cured me." Sold by W. Grange & Bro.

Death of an Aged Resident.

Another aged and respected resident of this district passed over to her reward last week in the person of Mrs. Margaret Birrell, at the advanced age of 85 years. Deceased was the mother of James and Robert Birrell, and breathed her last at the residence of the latter, Deseronto road, on Good Friday, after an active and useful life. She was a kindly, christian lady, and much beloved for her many endearing qualities. The funeral took place on Sunday to the Napanee cemetery and was largely attended.

After a lingering illness of consumption, Frederick Fitzmartin, North Fredericksburgh, passed away to his eternal reward on Thursday 15th inst. Deceased was a devout member of the Roman Catholic church and lived an honorable and blameless life. He was but 38 years of age and his untimely death is deeply regretted. A wife and family are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and a devoted father. The funeral took place on Saturday to the R. C. cemetery and was largely attended.

A Valuable Advertisement.

We were shown this week some handsome views of Napanee taken by J. S. Hulett and which Mayor Ward intends forwarding to Sir Donald Smith, High Commissioner, London, England. The photos comprise views from Mr. Mowat's residence, looking west, an excellent view of the falls, Centre street looking each way and many other streets which show the town off to the best advantage. Hulett has been improving the slack time by repapering, painting and renovating his studio and has now undoubtedly one of the handsomest photograph galleries in the Province. J. S. is a hustler always on the move, and has a faculty for "getting there" with the best of them.

A Napanee correspondent of the Whig writes:—John Ellis, of Kaladar township, aged eighty-five years, father of our townsman William Ellis, had a narrow escape from a horrible death week before last. A Credit to the Town.

All credit is due to the men who at a sacrifice of much time and labor have transformed the Western cemetery from a wilderness of weeds and underbrush into a well ordered, and handsome graveyard, a fit receptacle for the honored dead which lie within its precincts. The work commenced last fall, under the superintendence of J. R. Fraser, has been vigorously pushed on this spring, and the Western cemetery now gives promise of becoming one of the prettiest burying grounds in this district. A meeting of the plot holders will be held at the cemetery on Saturday, May 1st, and it is to be hoped that all will find it convenient to attend and discuss plans for furthering the good work of beautifying the city of the dead. By that time the wind mill will have been erected and the water pipes laid and the visit will be of interest to the plot holders.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room.

A large and appreciative audience witnessed the presentation of this old and popular drama, as put on the boards by Napanee Council 295, R. T. of T., at the Briceo opera house, on Monday night last. The characters were well taken and all acquitted themselves creditably. Mr. F. Sheppard, as Joe Morgan, and little Blanche Nesbitt, as Mary Morgan, the drunkard's child, displayed talent of a high order. E. B. Blair, as Simon Slade, played the part to perfection, and Miss Ida E. Hearn, as the drunkard's unhappy wife, was particularly good. P. Stevens made an excellent Harvey Green, and Thos. Hearn, as Willie Hammond, left nothing to be desired. John Gilpin essayed the part of Romaine, and the role suited him to a T. Mrs. Todd, as Mchitable Cartwright, and Mr. Todd, as Sample Switche, kept the audience in good humor. Mrs. W. Conway, the tavern-keeper's wife, played her part well. Bertha Howes' exhibition of rushing the growler was well worth the price of admission. The Desarte pictures, given at the conclusion of the play were very pretty and much appreciated. They were presented by the following: Florence Minchinton, Rachael Hayes, Nellie Mathieson, Dot Smith, Mabel Freeman, Laura Mitchell, Lizzie Woodcock, Bertha McCabe, Addie Freeman, Leon McAfee, Stella Wagar, Florence Dredge, Mabel Richardson, Annie Woodcock, Lena Hough, Eliza Richardson, Winnie Gault, Alice Smith, Jessie Gault, Maud Robinson, Alie Meagher, and a host of others.

Fied With the Money.

A case of peculiar interest to butchers and cattle buyers occurred a short distance from Napanee on Wednesday, and one that illustrates the danger of transacting business with irresponsible parties. On Monday Messrs. Norman Westmoreland and J. G. Loucks drove over to Mr. O. Parks, North Fredericksburg, and opened negotiations with him for the purchase of a beef cow. Mr. Parks wanted $25 for the animal and this the butchers agreed to pay, stipulating, however, that Mr. Parks deliver the cow in Napanee. This he wouldn't consent to, and the buyers departed without effecting a purchase. On Wednesday Messrs. Loucks and Westmoreland decided to accept Mr. Parks' offer and Westmoreland was dispatched for the cow. Mr. Parks was not at home when Westmoreland called, but a young man in his employ, one Arthur Wallace, was there and informed him that Mr. Parks had left instructions that if Mr. Loucks or Westmoreland called, to let them have the cow on receipt of the money. Mr. Westmoreland handed over the $25 to Wallace and took the cow. When Mr. Parks returned home that evening neither Wallace, the cow, nor the $25 were anywhere in sight. Mr. Parks drove to Napanee and after interviewing the authorities he apprised Messrs. Loucks and Westmoreland that he would hold them responsible for the cow. In fact warrants were under way for the arrest of both Loucks and Westmoreland, but the latter stayed proceedings by coming forward and agreeing to make good the money if Wallace is not apprehended. The police are on the track of the thief and Constable Sills is in possession of information that may lead to his arrest. Wallace is about seventeen years of age. It seems a hardship that Mr. Westmoreland, who acted in perfect good faith, should be held responsible, but viewing it in the other light the owner of property is entitled to every protection.

Our Whist Club.

The Napanee Whist Club, sent as its representatives to the Canadian Whist Congress last week a strong team composed of T. D. Prunty, E. H. Eaines, W. S. Herington and F. Jewmett. It was hoped that the trophy would be brought to Napanee but it turned out otherwise very greatly to the disappointment of the lovers of the game in town, and also of the management in Toronto, as it was pretty generally conceded that the Napanee team would carry away the trophy or give the winners a very hard battle for it. As it resulted the Champions of 1896 hold the trophy for 1897, beating Napanee by five points out of 260. The players when questioned as to the cause of the defeat have no special reason to assign and have no fault to find with each other and are still confident that they can hold their own with the champions or any other team at the congress.

Margaret Howes, the great unexpressible, is out for the establishment of a poor house. She acknowledges that she is now comfortably provided for, but would much prefer to live in a poor house, where she would not be beholden to a lot of profane and hypocritical men. The oil well work at Frederic'sburgh is to be resumed now in a few days. A new manager, Mr. Merrill, with three skilled workmen, are daily expected. New machinery of a much heavier class is ordered and will arrive in a day or so. The present well, it is said, is to be rimmed from the top to about a thirteen inch hole in order to carry the size to a greater depth and thus case off the water and have a dry well to work. The well is now full of water and working in this very great depth of water the stroke of the drill is so lightened as to have but slight effect on the rock. For these reasons the heavier stem and large bits are necessary to overcome the difficulty. A supply of coal has also been ordered.

The question of devising a scheme for the abatement of the tramp nuisance was discussed at the last meeting of the town council. Coun Miller said the town was overrun with these undesirable gentry and some means must soon be taken to get rid of them. Coun. Carson favored committing a few of them. Now that the warm weather is approaching they would not care to go to gaol. Coun. Perry advocated giving a cold bath to every hobo who struck town. Other devices for discouraging visits from tramps, such as the procuring of a wood pile and a few buck-saws, etc. were discussed, and the matter was finally referred to a committee consisting of the Mayor, the Police Magistrate and the Chief who were granted carte blanche to render it unpleasant for all weary Willies who visit our town.

In the afternoon a Sunday school service was held at which the children's missionary boxes were delivered. The choir was in full force, many new and effective voices having been recently added. The vestry meeting on Monday was rather disappointing both as to attendance and the informal report of the churchwardens. Norway's First Ironclad.

An ironclad for the Norwegian Government was launched lately from the shipbuilding yard of Sir William Armstrong & Co., England. This is the first sea-going ironclad owned by the Norwegians, who in the old days swept the seas with their Viking ships. This modern vessel was christened the "Harold Haarfaager," after the first King of Norway, by Mme. Stang, who is herself a descendant in the 33rd generation from King Harold. The ironclad is heavily armored and has a conning tower and two torpedo tubes and the armor belt is from four to seven inches thick. The builders have an order for a second ironclad for the Norwegians.
